

Sydney Norris Imagery

Sydney has been a photographer for 8 years and has a Journalism and photography degree from the University of Nebraska Kearney. Her love of travel, nature, and the outdoors are the common denominators in all of her creative endeavors. She worked as a communications manager and content creator for two separate natural resources agencies in Nebraska from the beginning of 2019 through the end of 2021. While working for these two agencies, she created informational booklets, retractable posters, newsletters, brochures, infographics, and videos statewide at the request of other offices and agencies. Sydney has taught photography workshops for her local art center and for a statewide marketing committee. She currently lives in the southwest with her husband where she owns Sydney Norris Imagery and sells her photos/graphic prints online and does contract/freelance work with clients needing designed publications, stock photography, digital graphics/logos, and any other creative needs. Sydney also does family photography sessions, couples of all ages, and senior portraits. She is well-rounded in her digital artistic skills and is always up for a challenge.

Sydney and her husband (a pharmacist at Gallup Indian Medical Center) moved to Gallup in the fall of 2021, and she has since been establishing her own media company within the area.
